The 1st International Conference
Microbial Ecology: An important Challenge for future

Sétif-Algeria, December 12-14, 2015

Organized by the Laboratory of Applied Microbiology LMA- FSNV Sétif1-Algeria
and
Laboratory of Microorganisms and Active Biomolecules LMBA-FSTunis-Tunisia

Preamble

Microbial ecology comprises two major research areas, ecology and microbiology. This discipline studies the biodiversity of microorganisms, their behavior in their environments, the contribution of their activities to the functioning of ecosystems, and the impact of biotic and abiotic factors of the environment on these microorganisms at the individual level to that of the microbial communities.

Microorganisms are major players in the ecosystem functioning and taking into account these different thematic fields, this discipline is in full development, having to provide answers to anthropogenic disturbance of the environment.

This first congress has now become a need for us. It enables researchers working in the fields of microbial ecology to meet and to exchange their scientific competences and their exciting findings. It will also offer the opportunity for young researchers to be known in order to help them to continue their career. The meeting will be organized by the Laboratory of Applied Microbiology from the University of Sétif1 and the Laboratory of Microorganisms and Active Biomolecules from the University of Tunis .

During this conference, important and topical themes where microbial ecology plays a key role, will be addressed: i) Microbial Biodiversity ii) Health and Environment iii) Adaptations / Biotic Interactions and iv) Microbial Biotechnology and Agro-Industry.

City of Sétif

The city of Sétif is located north-east of Algeria, 300 km east of Algiers the capital city at 1100 m of altitude in the high plains. The climate is continental with hot, dry summers and harsh winters. The province is the second in population after Algiers. The city has an international airport located 12 km west of the city.

Sétif is a city whose name derives from a Berber word that means black soil related to its fertility and was called by the Romans Sitifis.

Sétif is a city that therefore has a rich archaeological heritage; it was listed as World Heritage in 1981. It preserves vestiges of the third and fourth century exposed in the Archaeological Museum of the city that traces its history: prehistory, Numidia, Rome, and the advent of Islam. The tomb of "Scipion the African " is also in the region. Various steles are located in the garden Amir Abd El-Kader (ex garden of Orleans) in relation to the site of Cuicul called today Djemila, Roman town located 30 Km of Sétif, built in 98, then enlarges in the 3rd century during the reign of the Caracalla Emperor.

Setif is also famous for Ain El Fouara (fountain) located in the city center, a monument on which rests a statue of a woman. This impressive artistic representation but unavoidable in view of the visitor was realized by Saint Vidal in 1898.

Call for Abstracts and Deadlines

Participants are invited to submit their abstracts for oral and poster presentations describing original research in any of the conference scientific topics.
The abstract as MS Word doc should be written in English and not exceed 250 words, double-spaced in 12-point Times New Roman. It should not include subheadings, tables, or figures and should be written as one paragraph.
Abstracts must include: i) the title, ii) the authors full names, iii) the affiliations of all the authors, iv) e-mail of the corresponding author, and v) presenting author underlined.

Deadline for abstract submission: September 15th, 2015.
Notification of acceptance: October 30th, 2015.
